Suffering From Severe Attack of Grip Contracted While Talking to Fitzsimmons.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, Feb. 17.—Suffering from a severe attack of grip, which threatens to develop into pneumonia, James J. Jeffries, the heavy-weight champion pugilist, is confined to his room in the Hotel Minot, at No. 126 Eighth street and Fifth avenue. In consequence of his illness, Jeffries has been obliged to cancel all his theatrical engagements for this week. He was to have appeared at Altoona. Pa., last night. Although a giant in physique, the premier prize fighter has rather weak lungs, and if pneumonia sets in grave complications

If pneumonia sets in grave complications may be feared.

The Californian's illness is due to a neglected cold, contracted in Brooklyn, where he was playing last week.

After sparring with his brother "Jack" on Saturday night, Jeffries, while heated, instead of going immediately to his dressing room, stopped to talk near an open door to Bob Fitzsimmons, who had called on him. On leaving the theater Jeffries complained of chills and fever to his friend, Joe Maxwell Maxwell suggested that the champion consult a physician. Jeffries did not believe his condition was serious enough to require medical treatment, and instead went to a turkish bath for the night.

On Sunday he felt no better and toward evening went to the hotel, where he was taken ill. Maxwell summoned Dr. J. F. Egan, of No. 22 West One hundred and twentieth street. The physician told the champion that he was suffering from a severe attack of the grip and tonslitts and advised him to go to bed and remain several days.

Jeffries, who has never been ill before in his life, is a remarkably strong man He stands more than elx feet high, and weighs 250 plunds. Fitzsimmons, who watched Jeffries go through his performance on Saturday night, professed to be much impressed with the champion's speed. He said Jeffries's improvement in boxing surprised him. During a talk with Fitzsimmons after this bout, Jeffries caught cold. Fitzsimmons carefully watched every move and blow the big champion used and, after the contest, went in on the stage and told Jeffries what a fine boxer he was.

"That was a good bout, Jeff, said Fitzsimmons, grabbing the big fighter's hand." I am glad you liked it, Bob," replied Jeffries.

Both men then talked for a few minutes.

Jam gad you liked it, Bob," replied Jeffries. Both men then talked for a few minutes, after which they shook hands good-naturedly and, wishing each other good luck, departed.

"What do you think of Jeffries's boxing, Bob?" was asked.

"I think Jeffries has improved 100 per cent since he fought me for the championship. He is cleverer, faster on his feet and, besides, has developed into a great side-stepper and ducker.

"I did not think a big man like Jeffries could improve so much in such a short time."

Fitzsimmons has been doing light training since long before he was matched with Jim Jeffr'es. The Cornishman has been boxing frequently with Gus Ruhlin. Fitzsimmons has practically engaged Ruhlin to train him and also to act as his sparring partner. Fitzsimmons intends to put in two months of hard work at Bath Beach, after which he will start for the coast, to finish up his preparation.

tending the blizzard to witness the sixround bout between Joe Gans of Baltimore and George McFadden of New York at the Penn Athletic Club. The crowd was well repaid, for the set-to was fast and interesting from start to finish, and neither man had any decided advantage at the finish. Gans was in tiptop condition for the contest, thus bearing out the statement that the colored boy had trained faithfully for the meeting he was to have had here last week with Frank Erne. Joe tried his best to knock McFadden out. Gans was by far the more clever of the two, but McFadden's blows had the greater amount of force to them. round bout between Joe Gans of Baltimore blows had the greater amount of force to them.

The men mixed it up at a lively rate in every round, with Joe doing most of the forcing. In the second round Gans staggered McFadden with a left hook to the faw and he repeated with a similar blow in the fifth. On each occasion Joe tried hard to follow up his advantage, but McFadden came up strong in the final round and his heavy blows on Gans's body had a dicided effect on the colored boxer. The men were hard at it when the gong sounded the final round.

JEFFRIES THREATENED HARRY FORBES TO FIGHT TOMMY FELTZ.

Men Will Meet Before the West End Club Thursday Evening, February 27.

Harry Forbes and Tommy Feltz, two of the best-known bantams in the country, will furnish the next boxing contest at the West End Club, President Haughton having the men scheduled to meet in a fifteen-round bout Thursday evening, February 27. The weight will be 115 pounds, and the men will decide to-day whether they will weigh in at the ringside or at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Feltz has fought in the East almost en

Feltz has fought in the East almost entirely since he became prominent in the ring, his only bout in the West of late being a six-round affar with Morris Rauch in Chicago in 1900. Last year he fought entirely in the East and South, three buttles with Austin Rice being among his principal goes. One of these contests resulted in a victory for Feltz, another in a draw, and a third in a victory for Rice. All were twenty-round bouts.

Feltz lost but two fight last season, and both of these were on fouls after reports credit him with having the best of the bout. He lost to Joe Tipman in Baltimore after fighting thirteen fast rounds, through fouling Tipman while in a mixup. Tipman is the boxer who proved such a surprise to Terry McGovern when the former feather-weight champlon was in Baltimore. The curtain had to be rung down on that occasion to save the credit of Terry, who was said to be getting the werst of a siugging match with Tipman, who had taken advantage of the then champion's offer to meet all comers in fourround bouts.

Forbes's record is too well known here to need comment, his last battle having been his go with Danny Daugherty, which ended in Daugherty being knocked out in the fourth round. His previous battles here were a bout with Daugherty, in which the latter was knocked out in the second round, and a fifteen round bout with Abe Attell, in which Forbes got the decision.

Both men will arrive in this city the latter part of the week and will train for the few days before their fight. Joe Stewart will referce the bout. The preliminary has not yet been arranged.

time picking up an extra roll by coaching the Purdue University team at Lafayette, Ind. The captain of the Purdue team is Jesse L. Ruby, who is reported to have signed to play with one of the Three-Eye League teams after the close of the season. After pondering over the nomenclature of the Purdue captain, Ren Mulford, Jr., could not resist the temptation, and perpetrated the following: "Purdue's new captain is Jesse L Ruby of Carthage. He ought to make a jewel of a diamond leader."

Pete Husting, probably the fastest base-bail pitcher that Wisconsin has ever pro-duced, signed resterday at Milwaukee to play with the St. Louis American League play with the St. Louis American League club for the coming season for $2,000. This is contrary to his oft-repeated statements that he has left the diamond for good. Lest season, he asserted would be his last, and he formed a law partnership with his brother at Fond du Lac, Wis. He says in relation to his new contract that this year will be his last, and he will then begin the practice of his profession in earnest. Husting made a reputation as a pitcher when with the University of Wisconsin team, and left college to enter professional baseball. left college to enter professional baseball.

The output of ball players from St. Louis is not as large as it was a few years ago, but recently a number of young players, who have not been long out of the amateur ranks, are making their marks among the professionals. While Sudhoff is an instance of a pitcher developed at home and attaining success at home, contrary to that old saw, "a prophet is not without honor, except in his own country." Wills Popp, a player of still smaller stature than Sudhoff, and only a year old in League experience, is another local player who stepped into the National League this year, though, to be sure, there is a doubt as to whether he will play here. Frank Hulseman, the Lajole of the Southern League inst year, is badly wanted by Cincinnath, but openly intimates that he will not abide by the contract signed last November.

There is still another St. Louis boy play-timates that he will not abide by the contract signed last November.

There is still another St. Louis boy playing in the Southern League who should attain success in the big leagues if he continues to tread the straight and narrow path. Though scarcely more than 19 years old, Harry Swacina has all the marks of a comer. He is well known in this city, as he developed into an amateur star as a member of the crack Christian Brothers College team. He also played football for the Brothers and earned quite a name as an athlete.

Swacina played the field for Memphis in the Southern League last year, and at the close of the season was immediately reengaged. He prefers the outer garden, but is a fair utility man. In several games last year he worked behind the bat. Swacina is a youth of large stature, with not an ounce of superfluous fiesh. He trains down to a good weight, and the tobaccor liquor merchant gets none of his earnings. Swacina fielded .900 last season and hatted .233, which was not far behind Hulseman's record. Since the close of last season Swacina has received good offers from larger organizations than the Southern League. He turned them down, however, decilning to "jump" his Memphis contract. He says that he prefers to wait a season or two until he shall receive a thorough training before taking chances in faster company, where a bad impression at the beginning might injure his future chances. Should Swacina improve with age as he has done for the last three years, he should be a fixture in the baseball firmament before he arrives at the age of five and twenty.

age of five and twenty.

Disgusted with the Buffalo conference and at the state of affairs in the National League, President Johnson of the American League announces that the American has severed all relations with the National and in the future would have no dealings of any sort with the old organization. When Spalding appointed himself dictator of the National League, Johnson believed that he (Spalding) was the man to meet the situation—the Napoleon of the old league. Now the American executive has sickened of the tactics pursued by Albert G. who did not prove a Napoleon, but who is about to be banished by his former subjects to the Island of Obscurity.

Erve Beck, the former Spider, who is one of Bid McPhee's foundlings for next season, once figured in a duel. The Red elect was at Massillon, O., at the time, and the story, as it was related by Jimmy Dial, follows:

"Twas after the Swamp Angels had finished the season at Toledo in '99," said Dial, at a Rialto fanning bes, "that Erve Beck, itse Beck new second baseman, joined us.

A happy young soldier and his bride were at the same hotel with the horsehide biffers. Some of the boys had on their kidding clothes, and they made it lively for the lovers. Beek went a little beyond the limit of the soldier boy, and he received a challenge to a duel with oistois. Beek was game and accepted. Seconds were chosen, and everything stranged for a secret meeting at a lonely spot on the canal. They were to fight by the light of the moon. The seconds fixed up the guns with blank cartridges, and the combatants took their places. At the count of one, two, three both Beek and the soldier hot fired. At the sound the gang broke from behind the trees, tumbled the soldier into the canal and then made the circuit of the bases home. The military duelist crawled out of the wet, sneaked to the hotel and bundled himself and his new wife out of town on the first train!"

In any event, the organization will be in New York this season, and President Johnson's remark, "If we go into new York, I would like to be on the ground," is decidedly significant.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL New York, Feb. 17 .- Charles S. Norris of New YORK, Feb. II.—Charles S. Norris of this city defeated Wilson H. Sigourney of San Francisco to-night at the Knicker-bocker Athletic Club in the play-off of their tie for first prize in the class A 14-inch balk-line billiard tournament, which has been in progress for two weeks. The score was 400 to 377, the winner averaging 5 5-79. In their regularly scheduled game in the tournament, Mr. Sigourney won from Mr. Norris by fifty-five points in fifty-eight in-nings. At the close of the tourney each nings. At the close of the tourney each had lost only one game. More than first prize depended on the result to-night, for the winner would earn the chance to meet Wilson P. Foss for the $1.000 challenge cup, emblematic of the championship of America.

emblematic of the championship of America.

Mr. Norris, who is champion of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, won the bank, but falled to count. Mr. Sigourney quickly gauged the speed of the table and rolled uplo and 21, which gave him a good lead. Outside of a run by Mr. Norris of 29, which sent him to the front, play was slow until the twentleth inning. At this point he began manipulating the spheres in a way which pleased the spectators, and at the end of the twenty-seventh inning the score was 181 to 91 in his favor.

Mr. Sigourney's execution was not of the best. In the twenty-eighth inning, however, he showed something like his true form.

average, 4 55-75; high run, 49.
Referese-Florian Toblas, New York.

With one block of fifty points remaining to be played in the three-cushion billiard match for the championship of Missouri, Frank Day now leads E. C. Mack by twenty-seven points, and the latter will have to play billiards of a spectacular nature to stand a chance at the finish.

The third section of the match played at Hauser's last night brought out a crowd that packed the rooms and the spectators witnessed a splendid exhibition of uphill playing on the part of Mack. After missing twenty shots, during which Day drew twenty points ahead, the "Kid" finished gamely, reducing Day's lead to less than ten at one time. Notwithetanding his poor showing during the first part of the game, Mack played excellent billiards at the last, averaging better than one for the last twenty-six innings. Day played an unusually strong game in holding his lead, his average being better than 79. Mack's burst of speed brought his average for the game up to better than 58. Had he been able to play the same game all the way through the result might have been different. He finished eleven points behind Day and on the 150 points played is now twenty-seven buttons behind.

Though playing on his own table, Mack appeared in poor form at first. His game finished eleven points behind Day and on the 150 points played is now twenty-seven buttons behind.

Though playing on his own table, Mack appeared in poor form at first. His game was not marked by his usual fineness of stroke, and in more than a half dozen instances he was "kissed off" a "sure thing." He played an open game to his own disadvantage, as he left Day a number of easy positions.

Day appeared in excellent shape and his banking was of a high order. He started off with two counts of two, followed three innings later by a bunch of three. Mack tied the score at ten, and the following inning led by one button. Then came his streak of ill luck, and for twenty innings he watched Day draw further away from him without being able to reduce the lead. Day played a careful safety game, and left the twories always in hard position, and in other instances Mack displayed bad Judgment in rendering himself liable to "kisses." Day clicked off his points steadily, and before Mack again scored he was twenty points ahead—an almost overwhelming lead. It was during this interval that Day registered his high run of six, barely missing his seventh essay.

In the forty-second inning, Mack broke the ice with a count of 2 and Day responded with a like number. In the forty-sixth inning Mack decreased the gap by a run of 6, followed, after a miss, by runs of 3 and 4, which materially decreased Day's lead. Still 12 points bohind, Mack missed in five innings and Day again led by 17 points. At the finish the "Kid" displayed a burst of speed, running 7 in four innings. He missed in the seventy-strict fining, leaving Day a "natural," which he made and ended the game.

The game was referred by Clarence Hutchings in that official's faultless way, though he had some difficulty in subduing the excitement which was rampant at several periods. To-night the contestants will meet in the final section of the match at Hauser's.

In their third game the winners totaled 33 pins—a new mark for the Central League, and the high-water mark in any league. Last year their score was made in the Druggists' League, but it has not been excelled. The Admes' total of 1,435 pins is the best made in any league, although it was exceeded in the tournament of picked teams. Freddie Goetz was the most brilliant luminary of the evening, leading his team with an average of three pins better than 60. Ryan gave him good support, averaging 59. Mitchell did only two plus hetter than 55, but his columns of 8-9 were the best shown. The score:
